INDUSTRIAL OUTPUT INCREASES UNDER NATIONALIZATION

Nationalization did not bring standardization and shrinking of industry, lower productivity, or pauperization, but the opposite in each respect, as may be seen from the following figures: with 1939 production equal to 100, the production of the power industry reached 129 in 1945 and 187 in 1949; bituminous coal production had a corresponding increase from 116 in 1945 to 171 in 1949. Ore production rose from 93 to 244, textile production from 72 to 215, and metal products from 126 to 1,013.
